The two endings increase the feeling of volume experienced by the reader and make the story seem longer than it actually is!! There's no way anyone could guess the page count at first glance!!
DOUBLE END!!
FINISHING MOVE!!

According to my calculations, due to Double End's effect of increasing the feeling of volume as well as the tricks I played with timeskips and location changes, the page count should feel like nearly 40 pages to a first-time reader, and furthermore, thanks to the fact that the second ending is crafted to resemble the final chapter of a serialized work, the level of satisfaction he derives from it should be on par with that of a long-running series!!

SFX: INTENSE!

FINISHING MOVE!! DOUBLE END!!

Previously The 32-page draft of "Geko Geko" was finished
